

Hi New guy here

Posted by clubks - 30 Dec 2013 10:58

I dont know if this is the correct spot to post but i just kinda wanted to introduce myself, The name is Jonathan i am 23 & i just bought my first 944 which is in the porcess of being gutted. I dont really have experience racing door slammers i been go karting for 8 years and seeing how much open wheel racing cost & well testing just to begin with is expensive so i decided to get into the 944 bug.

So again i just wanted to say "hey" lol. Also i know it's cheaper to buy a spec car, but just know i do my own mechanic work & i work at a shop that does welding plus instead of useing the money for the spec car i ve had my eye sight on the Skip Barber racing school in Monterey. So hope to see you guys at the track soon.

Re: Hi New guy here

Posted by clubks - 30 Dec 2013 11:02

This is my car by the way

Re: Hi New guy here

Posted by norman#99 - 05 Jan 2014 10:54

Hi Jonathan, my name is Norman (Norm) (abnorm....) I am in the AZ region, please let me know if you have any questions or needs and with the nearly 200 944spec cars in the country we can answer just about any question.

Just as a precaution, first thing you should have done is replace the rod bearing, the #2 is our weak link and if it goes that creates so much more work than just replacing them.

From looking at your car's pictures, which is a very nice car by the way, you might want to get the suspension and ride height set up for learning and saving your tires.

It's all about seat time, Skip Barber has a good reputation, I am pretty sure some our drivers have been through their school, but get as much seat time as you can with the local clubs. Where do you live?

Welcome!

This e-mail address is being protected from spambots. You need JavaScript enabled to view it

Re: Hi New guy here
Posted by clubks - 05 Jan 2014 12:31

Hi Norman#99 thanks for the welcome ill defintly be emailing. Yea i am actualy going to be replaceing everything. I bought the oprv tool & gaskets & i am soon going to do the rod bearings as well. By the way i stay in los angeles area

Re: Hi New guy here
Posted by clubks - 05 Jan 2014 12:34

[attachment:2]C:fakepath20140101_140601.jpg[/attachment]

Already getting on the jenny craig diet

Re: Hi New guy here
Posted by clubks - 05 Jan 2014 12:38

Already getting on the jenny craig diet
