

Thinking of taking the plunge...

Posted by flyin_gnome - 27 Dec 2009 12:52

Hey all, I have been wanting to get into wheel to wheel racing for the past several years. It has been a tough choice in which class to run, but I have been torn between SpecE30, and 944 for quite a while...

As far as previous track time, I have spent the last 4-5 years doing HPDE's LapBattle/Time Trial Events and am looking to advance to the next stage of this horrible addiction.

Just recently I came across a 84' 944 for sale locally, track prepped, gutted, caged, bucket/harness, stock motor, but reworked suspension to 944 spec... I plan on going to see it tomorrow or tuesday as the price is almost too good to be true. Anything I should be looking for in particular before I make the jump?

Thanks

Eric

Re:Thinking of taking the plunge...

Posted by joepaluch - 05 Jan 2010 22:50

I agree.

The issue is the bar probably would need to be pulled to then put in a proper cage. Sometimes a roll bar can be used as base for cage. Not so with this.

So ok deal at best.
