

Check your Firewall!

Posted by AgRacer - 18 Feb 2014 17:12

I got an email from Only944.com about a new product they had for sale that is a firewall brace designed to reinforce the area around the clutch and brake master cylinders. I thought nothing of it until middle of last week when I was preparing for Barber.

After bleeding the clutch slave, I had to readjust the free play at the top of the clutch pedal travel. While doing that, I kept pushing the clutch in and out and realized that I could see light passing through the firewall just below where the clutch master mounts. The crack is about 3 inches long and I imagine will only get bigger with more use.