

New guy!

Posted by Irb Digital - 13 Mar 2012 11:40

Hey guys and gals. Im interested in building or buying a spec944 or spece30 and eventually competing in the nasa southeast region. I still have a ways to go with hpde's and developing track skills but I'm really interested in finding the right car. Spece30 seems to have more participation in this region, but the biggest hurdle for me is finding a a good car that is within a day's driving distance. To be honest my buddy down the road has already built a spece30 so I wouldn't mind trying the 944 route just to have a different challenge. So I registered here to listen, seek advice and hopefully find a 944 that I can race. If any of you know of a good 944 remotely close to the northwest Florida area please let me know. I'm not opposed to buying a built 944 but it will have to be cheaper than the standard $10k most seem to list for. What kind of participation is spec944 currently getting in this region? I'm posting from my iPhone and praying that I'm not triple posting

Re: New guy!

Posted by Irb Digital - 01 Jul 2012 19:35

Thanks. Oh and it looks like the main source of the leak is gone. After a spirited test drive this morning I left t sitting all day, and on found to small drops of oil underneath the car. So I'm pretty stoked, and just need to order some pads and tires for HPDE. Woot!
